ROCK GARDEN PLANTS

FALL
1934

Although perennials and rock garden plants may be planted at almost anytime of the year, Fall is one of the best times for planting. Plants set out in the Fall recover readily for three reasons: weather is cooler, more rains and the plants are more or less dormant. Even though no topgrowth is made, the roots will continue to grow until the ground is frozen hard. As soon as the first few warm days of Spring arrive the plants start to grow, and make considerable growth by the time the regular Spring planting season begins. It can be seen readily that well rooted plants from a Fall planting will give much better results than plants set out in the Spring.

PRICES: On orders of $1.00 or more we pay delivery charges. Orders less than $1.00 are not prepaid and, 15¢ should be added to the amount of the order to cover postage and packing.
